$500.00 was awarded to Lockheed Elementary School to support literacy intervention efforts for significantly remediated rising 2nd grade students.

“The support of the CobbWorks Literacy Council has been invaluable in educating and empowering our Franklin Gateway community. YELLS is now able to offer digital literacy classes to our families, enabling hardworking parents to gain the skills they need to utilize technology to advance their own careers and support their children. In a world where computers are essential tools for personal success and access to information, we’re so grateful that the CobbWorks Literacy Council is helping us tackle the digital divide by offering these classes to community members who want to improve their lives.”
